

«russian-Ukrainian war: social dimensions»

Fedir Shandor,
Uzhhorod National University, Ukraine

Today, the national and post-national mentality of the population forms the backdrop for different attitudes toward the war in general.

a) National - the heroic resistance and self-sacrifice of Ukrainians, confidence in winning, the unwavering courage of soldiers and mobilized volunteers, who are determined to defend their homeland from the enemy, that is far superior in strength.

b) Post-national - the western world relies on a professional army, which it finances, so that it does not have to take up arms if necessary.

Ukraine has become an irritant for global science and education, and educational wars have begun in the market:

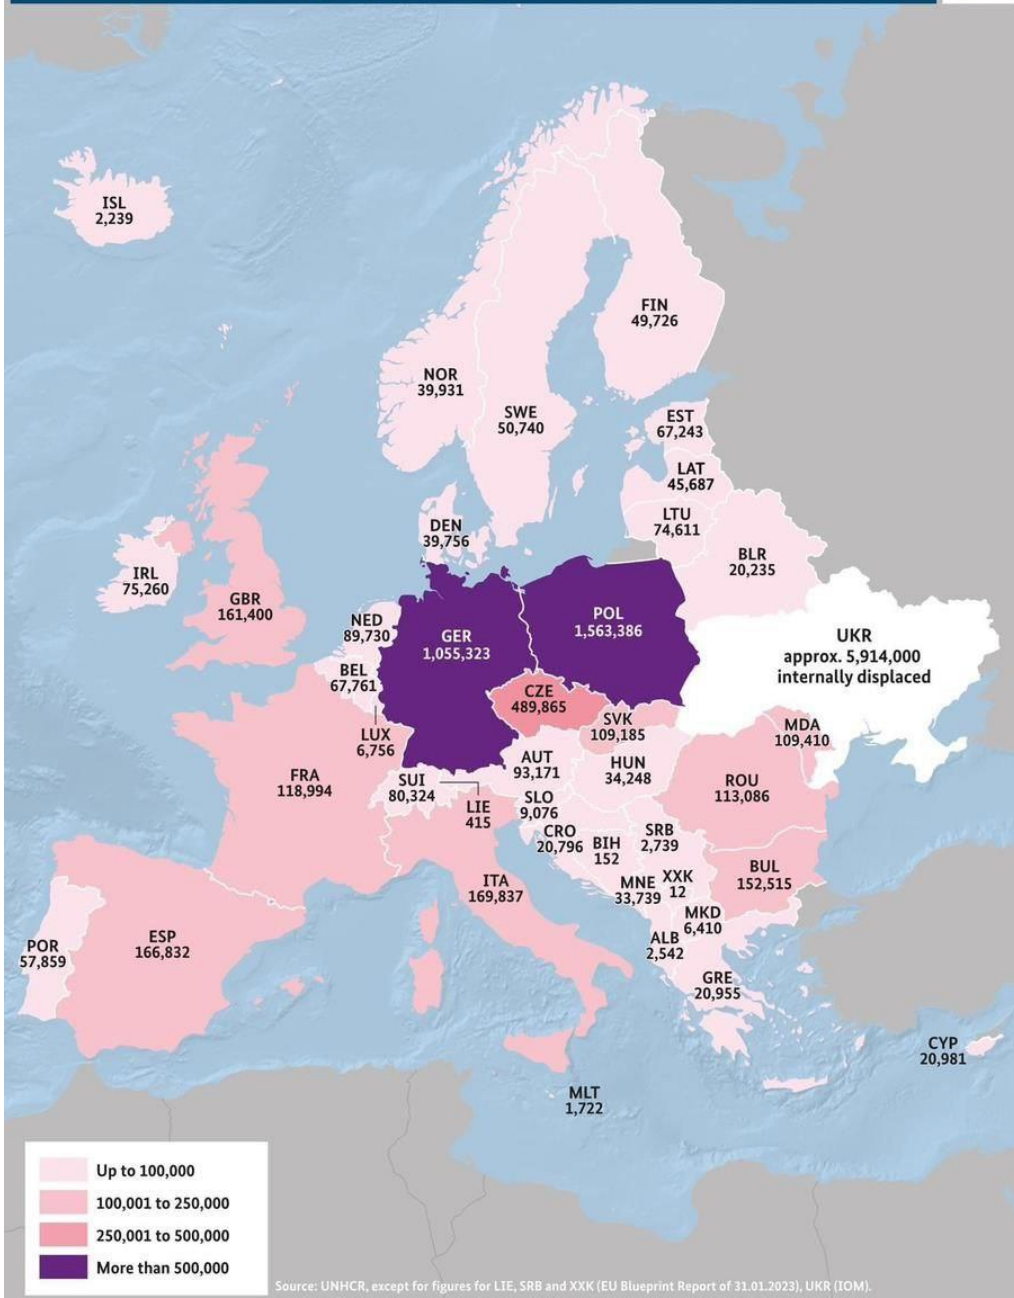

- The global front (differences between leading universities have disappeared due to global communication, it doesn't matter whether you study in Harvard or Uzhhorod);

- Theoretical (Popper's old theories have been proven to be negated, and new ones are questioned, and patriotism itself disappears when a person becomes comfortable);

- Cultural (traditional markers are blurred and not supported by new generations, especially outside the parent state);

- Futuristic (the progress of conformity has overcome the progress of dreams. It is better to have a new iPhone than to explore the Moon);

- Political (the old leaders turned out to be only a poorly disguised mimicry, and the conformist generation does not want to become new leaders);

- Civilization (easy and quick access to goods blurs the established and described borders of civilizations);

- Economic (high-paid education no longer provides easy access to new hierarchical levels, and new opinion leaders for young people, such as Musk and Taleb, have become rather exceptions, while ordinary managers like Jobs or Zuckerbergs are becoming role models);

- Technological (online education - after two years, six months of war and possibly another 2 years of new monkeypox or covid-23 - must be improved by the latest subjective factors, a new interpersonal matrix, otherwise progress will roll back to stability);

- Humanistic (educational charity has begun to generate massive social parasitism on the planet and, unfortunately, educators and scientists have become leaders of this ultra-leftist idea);

And in conclusion, dear audience, Taleb's modern theory of randomness for Ukraine has been clearly proven on the example of our enemy (or not an enemy) and our friend (or not a friend).

Дякую -Dziękuję-Thank you!
